Exhibitions: (see portfolio for examples: <http://tomzicarelli.com>)

Mother Culture, Island Street Theatre, Lawrence, MA and Celebration Barn Theatre, South Paris, ME. 2008-2009. An instrument constructed from PVC tubing, valves, duct tape, a saxophone mouthpiece, and a contact microphone is played through a distortion pedal and a delay unit to accompany an improvised "ghost dance" by Amanda Parkhurst.

Pluggo Project, F-Scott Gallery, Sudbury MA, and The Lily Pad, Cambridge, MA. 2007 - The keyboard is played through a Max/Msp/Pluggo program which employs a random 4 channel effects matrix.

When Touch is Touch, with Wade Kavanaugh, Owen Gallery, Bethel, Maine. 2003 - Sounds are produced by computer controlled, randomly tuned black box shortwave radio.

Ryoko, Gould Academy Science Center Dedication, 2002 - While Ryoko played the piano a Max/Msp/Jitter program displayed frequency analysis data and moving colored lines on the screen behind her.

Drumlights. Gould Academy music assembly. 2002 - A midi keyboard set to a drum kit patch is hooked into the lighting control board in the auditorium. The keys are mapped to specific banks of lights. We learned later from disgruntled faculty in the audience that this is a migraine trigger.

Musical Pants, by Ryan Linn, Yulefest, Gould Academy, 2001. Sensors made from pennies, foam rubber, and ethernet cables are hooked into an icube which triggers a midi synth module.

Musical Staircase by Jeff Keisel, Ordway Dining Hall, Gould Academy, 2000. Home made sensors are placed under a carpeted stairs. The sensors run via ethernet cable to a hacked radio shack mini keyboard which triggers a midi synth module. The idea was stolen from the Boston museum of science.
